From the London Times of December 28. The time is approaching when we may ex-pect to learn the answer of the Porte to the proposition transmitted from Vienna on the 7th inst. It is already known that these communications had been received at Constantinople on the 15th that Radschid Pasha had been induced by the representatives of the Four Powers to give them his support, and that they were to be taken into consideration by the Divan a few days after communication, received through Paris, but asyet unconfirmed, it is stated that the Great Council had, on the 18th inst., authorized, the Turkish ministers to open negotiations .-The questions put to the Porte by the Collective Note, are, in fact, two :-- Whether the Sultan will consent to treat for peace at a confer ence to be held with the Four Powers and Russia; and what are the terms of peace required | The people, however, threaten to demolish it, by Turkey, in the event of the opening of such a negotiation? It is probable that the Turkish ministers will insist on the evacuation of the Principalities as a preliminary to negotiation, but as it is a condition precedent which evidently could not be enforced, it is hoped that the Porte will content itself with a formal assurance | accidently killed in that city on Tuesday night. that the restoration of those provinces form in the eyes of all the powers an indispensable condition of peace. In other respects, Turkey will name her terms of peace, subject of course, to future discussion, but we hope the Porte will not overlook the importance of pledging all Central and Western Europe to her territorial loss of $15,000. security, by adopting the spirit of the conference to which she is invited, for though the Porte may have but little-confidence in the success of such negotiations, she loses nothing in dignity, and rather strengthens her cause in the eyes of Europe by allowing them to proceed. But we do not conceal from ourselves that the real obstacles to any beneficial result from the propositions lie with Russia and are not likely to be removed. The protocol of the Four Pewers records and assumes as an indisputable fact that Russia has repeatedly expressed her readiness to treat, and that the assurances of the court of St. Petersburgh, are in this respect, to be believed; but we have no reason to suppose that these assurances are worth more than the declarations Russia has repeatedly broken; and, if the language of the Russian State papers be enrefully examined, will be found that she has constantly evaded the recognition of any European rights in this question, or the an- tor Coopen, as President of the Sunbury and thority of any conference at all. Her policy Erie Railroad, as efforts will be made to withhas uniformly been to tie the Porte down by separate conventions to concessions giving her an exclusive right of interference; and, though she has failed in preventing the Four Powers from uniting in support of the principles on which peace might be restored, we have ceased to believe that more representations will suffice to earry those principles into effect. Moreover, the progress of the war, the vast extent of hostilities or hostile preparations now inactive progress, and the passions, religious and national, excited by the contest, effectually exclude the idea of an armistice, and have rendered negotiation far less practicable than it has been at any precious moment. If the emperor of Russia had desired peace he has had ample facilities to insure it; but every day brings as fresh evidence that he has availed himself of these pretexts chiefly to keep in check his most formidable opinions, to carry on his own plans of ope- day 700 bales of Corrox were disposed of at ration, and to bring the whole question in the spring to a more positive issue. The Austrian government, already beginning too late, and that the time for energetic meas- drooping. ures is at hand, has published in the official correspondence which is prepared at Vienna under the eyes of the Minister, a mean and drivelling article dictated, to all appearance, by the Russian embassy. After stating that the Four Powers are endevoring to effect by pacificmeasures and moral influence the restoration of peace, the Austrian Cabinet expressly denies that "it has assumed a less friendly or menacing attitude towards Russia, and declares that she has not in the least renounced her friendly sentiments towards her allied neighbor, and will not have to renounce them in future." The article adds, that the "intimate friendship between these two great monarchs is the surest guarantee tive interest of Europe." The appearance of at from 8 @ 9 per cent. premium. we fear, an evident proof that the independent portion of the Austrian Cabinet is unable to hold its ground and that a degree of pressure has been applied which the enfeebled empire cannot resist. The ink is scarcely dry on the protocol of the 5th of December when the Cabinet of Vienna are ready to repudiate its spirit, and to defeat the influence it might have exercised on Russia. We have not to learn anything of the faithlessness of that Court; all history is full of it; but, if the conduct of Austria opposes herself to the general interests of Europe in this conjuncture, and thereby greatly extends the disastrous effects of this repture, she may rely upon it that on her own deminions the first and heaviest retribution may fall.

On the North of Europe the influence of Austria is based on dynastic intrigues, opposed to the true interests and desires of the people. Thus in Sweden we learn from good authority that an attempt has been made by a mandate from St. Petersburg to engage the Court in this sontest, with a view to closing the Swedish pore and eventually the Baltic itself, against Eiglish and French vessels. The Sweeds are a sallant people, stoutly opposed to the influence of Passia, which has already robbed them of Finland, and is even now pressing into its service, by land and sea, men whose forefathers served in the wanks of Gustavus Adolphus and Charles XII.
